Cold outreach that gets replies

WHEN TO USE

First message to a prospect you've never spoken to.

THE PROMPT

Write a cold outreach message from [ME - freelance role] to [PROSPECT NAME] at [COMPANY] who [WHY THEY MATTER - e.g. just hired, wrote a post, expanded]. Goal: book a 15-minute call. Lead with one specific observation about their business or a post they wrote – not about me. Keep under 120 words. End with one low-friction question. Forbidden: 'I hope this finds you well', 'I wanted to reach out', 'passionate about'.

CUSTOMIZE

Replace the observation with something real you found. One specific line beats three generic ones.

WHAT GOOD LOOKS LIKE

A short, personal message that starts with their world, not yours.

Proposal that sells the outcome

WHEN TO USE

Sending a proposal for a project you genuinely want.

THE PROMPT

Write a project proposal for [CLIENT] for [PROJECT]. Client's goal: [THEIR GOAL]. My approach: [YOUR APPROACH - 2-3 sentences]. Timeline: [X] weeks. Budget: GH¢ [AMOUNT]. Structure: (1) the outcome they care about, (2) what I will deliver week by week, (3) what I need from them, (4) price with 2 options - full scope and a lean version. Tone: confident, plain language, no jargon. Under 400 words.

CUSTOMIZE

Add one line they said in your discovery call - it shows you listened.

WHAT GOOD LOOKS LIKE

A proposal a busy owner can skim in 2 minutes and say yes to.

Discovery call opener

WHEN TO USE

Starting a call with a new prospect.

THE PROMPT

I have a 20-minute discovery call with [PROSPECT] at [COMPANY] about [TOPIC]. Write me: (1) a 30-second opener that names the pain they likely have, (2) 8 discovery questions that move from their situation to their goals to budget, (3) a polite way to ask 'what happens if we do nothing'. Keep questions open-ended, no yes/no.

CUSTOMIZE

Pick the 5 questions most relevant to their industry.

WHAT GOOD LOOKS LIKE

A call script that makes you sound like you've done this a hundred times.

Follow-up that doesn't nag

WHEN TO USE

3-5 days after sending a proposal with no reply.

THE PROMPT

Write a follow-up email to [CLIENT] about my proposal for [PROJECT] sent on [DATE]. Keep it to 3 sentences max: (1) a value reminder tied to their goal, (2) one new small thing I can include for free, (3) a soft deadline question like 'shall I hold the slot for next week?'. Tone: helpful, zero pressure, no guilt. Forbidden: 'just following up', 'touching base'.

CUSTOMIZE

The 'new small thing' should be real and cheap to deliver.

WHAT GOOD LOOKS LIKE

A follow-up that adds value instead of begging for a reply.

Proposal negotiation - lean scope

WHEN TO USE

Client says the budget is too high.

THE PROMPT

The client loves my proposal for [PROJECT] but says GH¢ [AMOUNT] is above budget. Write a reply that: (1) validates the budget reality, (2) offers a lean version cutting [LIST - e.g. extra revision round, bonus report] to reach GH¢ [LOWER AMOUNT], (3) explains what they keep and what they lose, (4) leaves the full version on the table. Tone: confident, not apologetic.

CUSTOMIZE

Never cut your core deliverable - cut extras only.

WHAT GOOD LOOKS LIKE

A counter that keeps the project alive without gutting your value.

Testimonial request without the cringe

WHEN TO USE

Project delivered, client happy.

THE PROMPT

Write a short message asking [CLIENT] for a testimonial after delivering [PROJECT]. Make it easy: (1) remind them of the result in one line, (2) give them 3 fill-in-the-blank sentence starters like 'Before working with [ME]...' and 'The best part was...', (3) ask permission to publish on my site. Tone: warm, no pressure.

CUSTOMIZE

Name the actual result (e.g. 'the site launched on time and bookings doubled').

WHAT GOOD LOOKS LIKE

A request so easy the client says yes in 2 minutes.

Win-back message for old clients

WHEN TO USE

A past client who went quiet 3+ months ago.

THE PROMPT

Write a win-back message to [PAST CLIENT] who I last worked with on [PROJECT] around [DATE]. Structure: (1) one specific memory of working together, (2) one new capability I now offer that solves their known pain [PAIN], (3) a tiny offer - free 20-minute audit or a one-off task at a fixed price. Under 120 words.

CUSTOMIZE

Check their LinkedIn for recent news to reference.

WHAT GOOD LOOKS LIKE

A message that reopens a door without pretending nothing happened.

Upwork/Clients profile bio

WHEN TO USE

Writing your freelance profile summary.

THE PROMPT

Write a freelance profile bio for [ROLE] with [X] years of experience serving [TARGET INDUSTRY]. My best results: [RESULT 1], [RESULT 2]. Write 3 versions: (A) results-first, (B) story-driven, (C) contrarian. Each under 90 words, first-person, no buzzwords like 'results-driven', 'passionate', 'ninja'. End each with a clear 'hire me for...' line.

CUSTOMIZE

Use numbers from real projects, not generic claims.

WHAT GOOD LOOKS LIKE

A bio that makes a stranger confident enough to message you.

Pricing anchor email

WHEN TO USE

Client asks 'how much?' before scope is clear.

THE PROMPT

Write a reply to [CLIENT] who asked for my price for [VAGUE REQUEST]. Politely explain I price on scope, not guesses, and ask 4 short questions to scope it: goal, deadline, must-haves, budget range. Then give a price range GH¢ [MIN]-[MAX] 'depending on answers'. Tone: friendly, confident. Under 150 words.

CUSTOMIZE

Give a real range you're happy with - never quote before scope.

WHAT GOOD LOOKS LIKE

A reply that anchors your price and filters tire-kickers.

Saying no to bad-fit projects

WHEN TO USE

A project that's outside your skills or under your rate.

THE PROMPT

Write a polite refusal to [CLIENT] for [PROJECT]. Structure: (1) thank them + name the project, (2) say clearly I'm not the right fit because [REASON - scope/skills/bandwidth], (3) one genuinely useful alternative (referral, timeline suggestion, or a partial service I CAN do), (4) leave the door open. Tone: warm, zero guilt.

CUSTOMIZE

Actually offer the referral or alternative - it builds reputation.

WHAT GOOD LOOKS LIKE

A no that leaves the client respecting you more.
